Investment thesis

- The turnaround is already in the price: at ~$34, the market discounts EBIT margins rebuilding to ~11% by FY31. That is our base case too, so we see fair value, not a bargain.
- FY27 is a reset year: management guides revenue down high-single digits and adj. EPS of $1.15-1.35. We model -8% revenue and a ~5% EBIT margin.
- Self-help is real but back-end loaded: ~$2.5bn of Pace savings by FY31, inventory down 3% y/y and gross margin up 60bp in Q1 support the rebuild; China (-22% in Q1) is the swing factor.

Valuation: Price target $33.92 vs $36.96 current: -8.2% implied return → HOLD. DCF (perpetuity growth 2.5%, WACC 9.1%): $36.27 per share; exit-multiple method (9.2x EBITDA): $34.54.

RISKS

Key risks and what would change our view

Flagged by the data

- Margin compression: EBIT margin down 3.4pp over three years; the forecast assumes a recovery, which is the key swing factor.
- Valuation leans on the terminal value (77% of DCF enterprise value), so it is sensitive to WACC and long-run growth (see sensitivity tables).
- Premium multiple (12.0x EV/EBITDA vs peers 9.2x) despite below-median growth.

Analyst view

- China keeps falling: margins stall near 7% and value drops to ~$22 (our 'stuck' case).
- Share loss to challenger running brands (On, Hoka) limits pricing power.
- Execution slips: with recovery already priced in, there is little cushion for delays.

Catalysts

- Q2 FY27 results (expected late December): first read on China and holiday sell-through.
- Signs that Greater China declines are bottoming.
- Delivery of Pace savings as restructuring charges roll off.

APPENDIX

Methodology, data and limitations

- Data. 10-K/10-Q XBRL facts from SEC EDGAR for NKE and 6 peers, standardised across tag changes and restatements; every value traceable to its filing (Excel: Sources sheet). Prices: Yahoo Finance / Stooq; risk-free: FRED DGS10.
- Benchmarking. Latest fiscal year for each company; percentile ranks oriented so 100 = best; trends use the peer median and quartiles.
- DCF. 5-year forecast, unlevered FCF, mid-year discounting, Gordon growth and exit-multiple terminal values.
- WACC. CAPM with a bottom-up beta (peer regression betas, Blume-adjusted, unlevered and relevered); cost of debt from a synthetic rating.
- Price target. Weighted blend of DCF (perpetuity and exit multiple) and trading comps; rating thresholds +15% / −10%.
- Limitations. No consensus estimates or stub-period adjustment; multiples on the latest fiscal year, not LTM; operating leases excluded from debt; peer set chosen by the analyst.
